POLICE RAMP UP HUNT FOR COLSTON STATUE VANDALS

Somerset police have ramped up the hunt for those involved in the toppling of the Bristol Edward Colston statue, which was pulled down 11 days ago; releasing still images of 15 people they are trying to track down as part of their investigation. Full body pictures can be found here...

Detective Superintendent Liz Hughes said:

"The incident attracted worldwide attention and there's no denying it has polarised public opinion – but in the eyes of the law a crime has been committed and we're duty-bound to investigate this without fear or favour."

"A significant number of enquiries have already been carried out including the examination of the large amount of footage and photographs which have circulated online and on social media, as well as footage from the network of CCTV cameras in and around the city centre and Harbourside."

If only the police at the time had tried something other than just standing back and watching...

Last week, Guido reported the growing anger amongst Tory MPs, who perceived a much slower pace in bringing justice to the statue-fellers, in comparison to the right-wing PC Palmer urinater. Unfortunately, most of the Bristolian vandals were masked, and the PC Palmer protestor had the decency to hand himself into the police...

It's very disappointing to note that Guido has overlooked the fact that the 'right-wing PC Palmer urinator' voluntarily attended a police station as soon as he became aware that he was wanted.

If they'd grabbed them when they started destroying stuff, it would have been a lot easier.

Ooh! Really? A real Hunt? Wow. There will be loads of people out there who know who they are. A public Hue & Cry should be declared. Hunt them down, arraign them in court and then I don't doubt they will be given a really, really.....stern telling off!

And I don't suppose for one moment that I am exaggerating, sadly.

it would have been a good idea to withdraw the police and send in a troop of girl guides,they would have got more done.

They'd have a lot more initiative and less fear than the reluctant bystander cops showed during the event

Move some of the money being wasted on the McCanns over to where real policing, or what used to be called real policing, can be usefully applied.

The beat cops in the peaceful pre-socialist labour days would have given them a clout on their ear hole and dragged them home to their mothers for a real thumping.

It is bad enough for someone to attempt to rewrite our History, but it is worse for the Police to now say they can't catch him.

Couldn't they get up off their knees at the time?

This is a joke. By pedantically pointing out that "in the eyes of the law a crime has been committed" she is brazenly the law & crime has been committed she is brazenly admitting that the police don't believe in this investigation. There was a time when 'in the eyes of the law' was indivisible from 'in the eyes of the police', but since they've been so thoroughly corrupted by Common Purpose this is no longer so. Like a petulant teenager, ordered to tidy her room she is going to make sure the absolute minimum is done. Don't expect any real results from this exercise in taking the p***.

A review of the UK's international obligations surrounding Refugees and Asylum should take place. Additionally anyone granted asylum should give an undertaking that they will lose their status and be returned should they be imprisoned after conviction for an imprisonable offence, even if that means non-refoulement is engaged.

4 Share Reply

Somehow the MSM conveniently never mention that, too busy showing the poor unfortunates and especially their babies who are the victims of our Governments callous violation of their EUHCR rights, which somehow were ignored as they traversed a whole bunch of 'safe' counties, including France who is quite happy to drive them out and escort them to the waiting arms of the UK's Ferry Service, the Border Farce for registering to recieve their dole money and free stuff.

Sorry to disappoint but the Riot Damages Act 1886 was repealed in 2017, having been replaced by the Riot Compensation Act 2016. This was described as a 'streamlining' which, to you and me, can be translated into 'fewer ways to claim compensation'.

Oh yes guilty as hell but no one in Liverpool would convict him. Bit like the football manager Alex Ferguson who drove in a prohibited traffic lane but got off it because he said with medial evidence to back it up he needed a wee. But he never told the officer who stopped that. Guilty but not guilty if you see what I mean.

Talking about the police standing by. What about the children present to in reading at their school today when the two headteachers spoke publicly about their murdered teacher. There were hundreds of pupils there with no thought whatsoever to social distancing and who was at the front of the crowd? a policewoman. I wonder how many of their parents were against sending their children to school because it was not safe to do so. Maybe someone ought to be having a word with the policewoman for condoning what took place.
