Vernon Coleman's Banned YouTube Broadcast Coronavirus: Why You Are Now in Great Danger

Dr Vernon Coleman MB ChB DSc FRSA

NOTE: This is a transcript of Vernon Coleman's third video which was first aired on YouTube on 15th April 2020. On 11th May 2020, YouTube decided to remove the video and to ban it. The video had received 24,357 views, 278 comments and 1,100 approvals. We have no idea why this video was banned – though it might have embarrassed a number of governments. The facts it contains are all accurate and the video did not appear to breach any of YouTube's published guidelines. Vernon was, however, wearing a fairly lively shirt.

So, we can now be pretty sure that the over 75s are going to be denied medical treatment. The first inklings have appeared. And compulsory vaccination is on its way. I got those two right, I'm afraid.

So, what else is planned?

Cheques and cash will be gone within a year or two at most. We'll have to use plastic for everything we do. That will give the State complete knowledge about our movements and habits.

And I can pretty well guarantee that the 'temporary' powers the Government has given itself (and the police) will turn out to be permanent. When Governments grab power they tend to hang onto them. As Milton Friedman once observed 'nothing is as permanent as a temporary Government programme'. In the UK, one former Supreme Court Judge, is reported to have talked about 'collective hysteria' and to have used the phrase 'police state'.

The Government knows where all pensioners live but, despite having forbidden relatives or friends to visit them, has made no effort to ensure that the elderly are receiving food supplies. How many old people will starve to death in the next two months? How many dead bodies will be found behind locked doors?

The Government must know that the lockdown will result in many deaths in the future. Operations and treatment programmes have been 'postponed' though no one knows for how long. People are eating what they can find and getting little or no real exercise. Indeed, unless the Government is comprised entirely of halfwits they must realise that the lockdown will have already killed far more deaths than the coronavirus.

But the Government has had it easy so far. The media has built up the 'crisis' with a daily diet of aggressive fear-making. There has been no proper debate. And the constant building up of the fear has worked. Most people are surprisingly happy about being locked in. They are enthusiastic about vaccination. They are watching far more TV than ever and drinking more booze than ever – taking too little exercise and eating too much.

Nevertheless, it has long been clear that the coronavirus fiasco is either the biggest cock up in world history or the result of a conspiracy. I've given my views on that on my website where there is more space to discuss these things and give background facts.

Some pathologists have decreed that dead patients who have the coronavirus must now be cremated without examination. I've seen a briefing which states: 'If a death is believed to be due to confirmed COVID-19 infection there is unlikely to be any need for a post-mortem examination to be conducted and the Medical Certificate of Cause of Death should be issued'. The key word here is surely 'believed'.

Knowing that nowhere near enough people are dying of the coronavirus to justify the oppressive new measures they've introduced, the authorities are quietly making sure that most of the people who die are classified as coronavirus deaths. Indeed, there is some evidence that people are being classified as coronavirus victims without ever having been tested. It seems that Britain is doing what the Italians did – if a patient has the virus and they die then they died of the virus. But I suspect we're going one step further. If someone who dies is thought to have had the virus, or might have had the virus, then they are coronavirus victims and their death is added to the total. The lack of testing makes this easy.

Today, it is clear that the cure, not the problem, is causing the crisis.

Right at the beginning of the coronavirus affair I pointed out that according to the World Health Organisation, the ordinary flu kills between 250,000 and 600,000 people a year – most of them in the winter months. I said that if the coronavirus hadn't killed between 100,000 and 150,000 people around the world by the middle of April then it would be clear that it was not as dangerous as we had been told and, indeed, not as dangerous as the flu.

Well, the authorities are claiming that the death rate from the corona has now reached 100,000.

So is the coronavirus as deadly as the mathematicians and the politicians said it was?

No – because they have fiddled the figures.

Today, anyone who has the coronavirus, or is thought to have it even though they have not been tested, will be put down as having died of the coronavirus. Time and time again, the authorities report that someone died 'with' the disease. Not 'of' the disease. And yet those patients are put down as having died as a result of the coronavirus.

So, if you fall downstairs and break your neck, but you had a cough before you died, then you will be classified as a coronavirus death. If you had a heart attack but were thought to have the coronavirus then you officially died of the coronavirus rather than the heart attack. A lack of widespread testing makes this possible. And post mortems have been abandoned for many patients.

In my second video I explained why the Italian figures for coronavirus deaths cannot be trusted – indeed, 88% of those who officially died of the coronavirus almost certainly died of something else. The evidence for that is on my website.

And in the UK, Imperial College (which originally forecast the coronavirus would kill 500,000 people in the UK) has apparently admitted that two thirds of the people who have been listed as having died of the coronavirus would have died anyway – of something else.

I have no doubt that the figures have been distorted in the same way in other countries.

So, using figures from UK and Italy, the total worldwide number of deaths from the coronavirus is, at most, probably between a quarter and a third of the alleged current total – that is it may be between 25,000 and 33,000 but is probably considerably lower.

And that makes the coronavirus far less deadly than a mild strain of the flu. It is certainly absurd to compare it to the plague as has frequently been done by hysterical commentators. The plague killed 40% of the population when it swept through Europe. And to compare the coronavirus to the Second World War is an insult to those soldiers and civilians who lived through those terrible years.

Fiddling the figures is the final, cruel deceit – to sustain the fear and to excuse the new totalitarian tactics being used to keep us all quiet.

Meanwhile, it is now widely acknowledged that, as I wrote some time ago on my website the number of people who have died as a direct result of the restrictions brought in by governments will far exceed the number of people who will die as a result of the coronavirus.

The British Government has now admitted that the side effects of the `cure' (the lock-downs and so on) will result in 150,000 unnecessary deaths in the UK. (Regular readers will remember that on 30th March I suggested on www.vernoncoleman.com that the unnecessary death figure would be 100,000 to 250,000.) No one is now suggesting that there will be anywhere near that number of deaths from the coronavirus in the UK. Globally the lockdown will result in millions of deaths.

A senior NHS official has expressed `concern' that sick children are not being treated because of the coronavirus `cure'.

And the United Nations estimates that worldwide 25 million jobs will be lost as a result of the coronavirus. Some claim the figure could be as high as 190 million. Actually, virtually no jobs will be lost because of the virus. It's the lockdowns which will cause the job losses.

Every fact I have provided has been absolutely accurate. Every prediction I've made has been proven accurate.

So why don't the authorities admit that they got it wrong?

Even if they wanted to do so the scientists, the politicians and the media are now wedded to this deceit. Even if they wanted to, how could they possibly admit that they got it all so very, very wrong?

But there is another danger that no one seems to have noticed.

By exaggerating the number of deaths, and allowing the figures to be falsified, governments are endangering us all. You cannot learn about a disease when you don't keep proper records. I suppose the world's governments could have made a bigger mess of dealing with this but I can't see how. No one seems to have any idea how to end the lockdown or banish the fear.

The evidence that the coronavirus has been exaggerated is all around us. In the UK the government has admitted that the NHS has 2,295 empty intensive care beds. The average number of empty intensive care beds before the coronavirus `crisis' was 800. So, the NHS has 1,495 more empty intensive care beds during the coronavirus `crisis' than it had before the so-called `crisis' began. And it has been reported that almost half the beds in some English hospitals are lying empty.

Whether you believe in a cock up or a conspiracy we are heading for a manufactured coronavirus apocalypse. The lockdown and totalitarianism are troubling but I fear we are in the calm before a manufactured storm of unprecedented ferocity.
